

Ravi Ammigan

Ravi Ammigan is the Associate Provost for International Programs and an Assistant Professor in the College of Education & Human Development at the University of Delaware (UD). With over 20 years of experience in international higher education, he has held a number of leadership and administrative positions in student and scholar services, education abroad, and enrollment management. He currently directs UD's Center for Global Programs and Services and leads the university's internationalisation strategy and global engagement efforts.

Ravi's primary research focuses on the experiences of international students, with a focus on campus living, learning, and support services. He is editor of the book "Cross-Cultural Narratives: Stories and Experiences of International Students" (OJED, 2021) and co-edited "COVID-19 and Higher Education in the Global Context: Exploring Contemporary Issues and Challenges" with Roy Y. Chan and Krishna Bista (STAR Scholars, 2021). He has presented widely at international education conferences and has been active in professional organizations such as NAFSA: Association of International Educators, where he served as Chair of the Knowledge Community for International Student & Scholar Services in 2015.

Born and raised in Mauritius, Ravi left for the United States in 1997 to pursue his undergraduate studies as an international student himself. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Kendall College (USA), a Master's in Communication from Michigan State University (USA), and a PhD in Higher Education Internationalisation from Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore (Italy).
