Tom Garriepy is the Senior International Officer at Harvard University's Division of Continuing Education (DCE), where he leads strategic initiatives aimed at expanding global access to Harvard's continuing education programs. In this role, Tom drives the Division's mission to increase higher education accessibility for international audiences, fostering DCE's capacity to support a diverse and dynamic student body.

Before joining Harvard, Tom spent 12 years at Boston University as a senior member of the Dean's leadership team, where he was instrumental in shaping the global strategy for continuing and extended education. His responsibilities included developing and overseeing international operations, while aligning strategic goals across business units to maximize impact and efficiency.

Beyond his work in higher education, Tom serves as a strategic advisor to several EdTech startups and educational organizations. He is on the management board of The Centre for Higher Education Internationalisation (CHEI) at Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, which focuses on research, training, and policy to strengthen international dimensions in higher education. Tom also led strategic partnership initiatives for the U.S. chapter of the Forum Francophone des Affaires (FFA-USA), a global alliance promoting economic development among 36 Francophone nations.

With over 20 years of experience, Tom is passionate about business development and regularly consults with entrepreneurial organizations across international education, online learning, and education technology.

Tom holds a B.A. in International Affairs from the University of Maine and an M.B.A. from Boston University's Questrom School of Business.
